Topic: Para-jumbles 2

Para-jumbles 2

The Non-MCQs

What are Para-jumbles?

“

Para-jumbles = a Jumbled
Paragraph

“

A paragraph whose sentences are jumbled. The examiner wants us to figure out the correct order/sequence of the sentences.

Approach to Para-jumbles

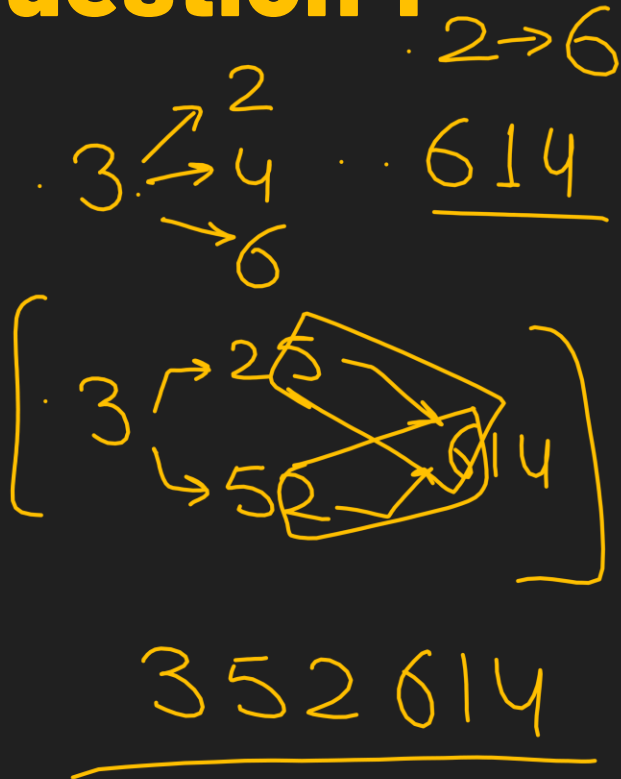

Scientific Approach to Para-jumbles

- Read all the sentences actively → looking for the clues
- Avoid the temptation of looking for the opening sentence
- Identify sequences and mandatory pairs using word-based and idea-based clues.
- Use the ~~elimination~~ approach* to arrive at the answer.

Question 1

1. I enjoyed plucking the leaves and twigs ^(of the tree) too.
- 2. I often sneaked into the yard during those sleepy summer afternoons.
3. One of the fondest memories of my childhood is that of a cherry tree in the backyard ^(of our house).
4. However, I later realised that it was harmful for the tree.
5. Behind the yard there was an alley and then more houses.
6. Once there, I climbed the tree and savoured warm, sun-kissed cherries.

1. Biological weapons are not as expensive to manufacture as nuclear weapons, yet a lethal biological weapon might nonetheless be the strategic weapon that would win a war. ←
2. However, such programs can be easily hidden and disguised as vaccine plants and benign pharmaceutical-production centres.
3. This prospect of military advantage might tempt some regimes to acquire the weapons, though perhaps clandestinely. = secretively
4. That said, of the more than 190 members of the United Nations, only a dozen or so are strongly suspected of having ongoing biological weapons programs.

1.

But the nickel in cathodes is relatively unstable and therefore reacts easily with other elements, leaving the cathode surface covered in undesirable impurities.

2.

-ve

That reduces the battery's storage capacity by 10–18% during its first charge-discharge cycle.

3.

+ve

Lithium batteries have cathodes made of alternating layers of lithium and nickel-rich oxide materials, because nickel is relatively inexpensive and helps deliver higher energy density and greater storage capacity at a lower cost than other metals.

4.

-ve

Nickel can also cause instability in the interior of the cathode structure, which further reduces storage capacity over extended periods of charging and discharging.

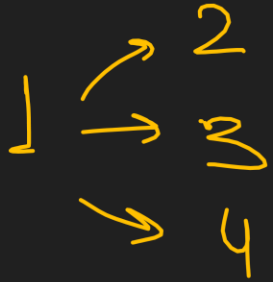

Question 4

4 → 3 → 2 → 1

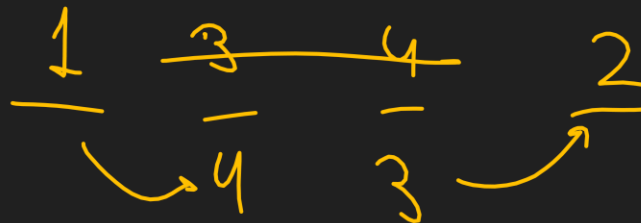

4 3 2 1

1. With that, I swallowed the shampoo and obtained the [most realistic results almost on the spot.]
2. The man shuffled away into the back regions to make up a prescription, and after a moment I got through on the shop-telephone to the Consulate, intimating my location.
3. Then, while the pharmacist was wrapping up a six-ounce bottle of the mixture, I groaned and inquired whether he could give me something for acute gastric cramp.
4. I intended to stage a sharp gastric attack, and entering an old-fashioned pharmacy, I asked for a popular shampoo mixture, consisting of olive oil and flaked soap.

Question 5

1. Mind-reading sounds like science fiction. But the term, also referred to as “mentalising”, is a psychological concept used to describe the process of understanding what other people are thinking.
2. Mind-reading is different from the psychological process of empathy. → Differences?
3. It helps us to understand another person’s viewpoint or know when someone is saying something that they do not mean, such as being sarcastic or lying.
4. We may not be aware of it, but we use mind-reading every day when we interact with each other.

Question 6

2+3 → 4 → 1

1. In general, the youth learnt to be there where they were not expected.
2. Peers ridiculed serious academic commitment, and it was considered better if you appeared casual about studies, talked of boredom, made fun of the teachers and yet managed to get a good grade.
3. Basically, one needed to create an impression that one only needed to use part of one's intelligence to make through the college.
4. To display this de-emphasis on academics, the peer culture provided opportunities for sparring, hanging around the cafeterias, cutting classes and going to see films.

Question 7

4 → 2

3 + 1 → 4 → 2

3 1 4 2

1. One proposal, therefore, is to introduce plea bargaining.
2. Reformers hope that this alone will reduce the prison population by about 35% and prevent jails from becoming universities of crime for the merely wayward.
3. At the moment, the weakest and poorest always go to prison for the pettiest of crimes, sent there by judges wedded to inflexible interpretation of a convoluted penal code and procedure-bound juridical administration.
4. Judges will be given alternatives to prison such as community service, as a punishment for minor infractions.

2 → 1 → 3
1 → 4

Question 8

4 → 3

2 1 4 3

1. The CWS used by both the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") and Department of Justice ("DOJ") analyzes the effect on the final price to consumers with some consideration of non-price factors such as innovation, quality, and efficiencies.
2. The definition of the Consumer Welfare Standard ("CWS") as a measure to judge the effects of market consolidation or firm competitive practices is under review.
3. This price-based CWS is now under scrutiny, because recent studies suggest there is an ongoing economy-wide increase in concentration.
4. The price-based CWS has been a fairly objective and consistent standard based on economic theory and market facts.

Fixed → A.

Question 9

$$4+2 \rightarrow 3$$

$$1+3$$

$$4213$$

In America, highly educated women, who are in a stronger position in the labour market than less qualified ones, have higher rates of marriage than other groups.

1. Some work supports the Becker thesis, and some appear to contradict it.
2. And, as with crime, it is equally inconclusive
3. But regardless of the conclusion of any particular piece of work, it is hard to establish convincing connections between family changes and economic factors using conventional approaches.
4. Indeed, just as with crime, an enormous academic literature exists on the validity of the pure economic approach to the evolution of family structures

Question 10

2 → 4+3
24351

1. The feminist stage of women's writing involves an emphasis on the rights and values of minority as well as a valorization of their difference.
2. Just stop for a minute and take another look at the distinction between the terms "female" and "feminine".
3. Elaine Showalter, however, offers a completely different usage of these terms in the area of women's writing, in the process also providing a perspective on feminism.
4. You will remember that the two words were respectively used to refer to a set of biological characteristics, and a set of culturally defined ones.
5. She suggests in "A literature of Their Own" that the feminine stage of women's writing involves a period when the prevalent ~~dominant~~ standards and tradition are imitated and internalized.

Question 11

1. New words come in, and the old words acquire new meanings.
2. This is the cause of what may be called the natural change.
3. The reason lies perhaps in the fact that so many people, millions in fact, speak a language under varying conditions and in different situations.
4. An interesting question is: why do languages break up and fragment into different dialects, sub dialects, varieties and other languages?
5. Languages also start changing when they come in contact with one another.
